

“Andromeda’s Black Hole is Winking at Us”

The Andromeda Galaxy, also known as M31, is the nearest spiral galaxy to the Milky Way and the largest galaxy in our local group. It's located 2.5 million light-years from Earth and is visible to the naked eye from the northern hemisphere on clear, dark nights. Similar in structure to the Milky Way, Andromeda contains hundreds of billions of stars, as well as a supermassive black hole at its core. Studies have revealed that Andromeda and the Milky Way are on a slow motion collision course, due to merge in about 4.5 billion years time, forming a new, larger galaxy.

“Surprising galaxy shines through fog of the early universe”

- The early universe was filled with a thick fog of neutral hydrogen. Even though the first stars and galaxies emitted copious amounts of light, that light struggled to pierce this fog.
- It took hundreds of millions of years for the neutral hydrogen to become ionized – electrons stripped from protons – so that light could travel freely through space.
- But one galaxy in the early universe has caught astronomers by surprise. Scientists have spotted a bright emission of hydrogen from newly discovered galaxy JADES-GS-z13-1, even though the cosmic fog should have absorbed it.

Egypt Loses its Spiritual

“O great city, O heart of Egypt, your habitations are overthrown and your sacred shrines lie buried beneath the sands of time. The dust of ages enwraps you, as a dead one is swathed within the tomb. Your temples still stand and ring with noise, but the solemn shrines are silent. They have become an abode for the wild dog and scorpion, and your roads are highways of wickedness.

“Behold, in the days long gone down into dust, the whirlwind came and earth poured out her wrathful breath, so that you were burnt. The evildoers were swept away by the waters, and the wicked ones were swallowed up in the fires. The days of the years were shortened and the times of all things altered. The seasons were turned around, so that the seed rotted within the soil, and no green shoots came forth to greet the day. All buds withered upon the vines, the land lay dead under its grey shroud. The moon changed the order of her ways, and the sun set himself a new course, so that men knew not where they were and all were afflicted. The stars swam in a new direction, and the whole order of things was changed. Yet, O Egypt, even from those days of calamity you emerged unbroken, your spirit intact, your heart unshaken. What has happened to you, O land of mine?

“Weep, O land of Egypt, weep for the things that have gone. Weep for the spirit now-departed. Weep for the betrayed gods, weep for The Great God so high above them that you scarcely knew him. Weep for the destruction that has befallen you. Weep for all the beauty and glory that have gone down into the dust. Weep for eternal ages, and sleep for evermore. Your spirit has departed, your life had ebbed away, your vitality has burnt itself out, only the empty corpse remains. The generations yet to tread the Earth will know nothing of you. They will see no more than the dead, dried, mummified thing. The loving life that once vitalized it so gloriously, they cannot know. O Son of Kebew, forgive the people of this land for their ways. Reveal your greatness by serving those who no longer walk in the light of your instruction, even as you served their fathers in days gone by.”

-The Kolbrin Bible (Man:33:1-3)

Sacred Shrines Buried

This quote from the Kolbrin Bible indicates that Egypt was already losing its status as a world leader of spiritual development, even at the time this was written many centuries ago. If you have studied ancient spiritual schools at all, you know that ancient Egypt was a leader in spiritual sciences. Unfortunately, materialism took over, as it did in so many other places. As a result of this loss, crime became common, which is why it says the roads became “highways of wickedness.”

Days Long Gone

It isn't difficult to understand this part of the quote. The whirlwind and the wrathful breath of the earth probably refer to volcanoes and tornadoes. While there are no active volcanoes in Egypt today, it is believed that there were some in ancient times.

There may also have been earthquakes causing tsunamis, which explains the part about evil ones being swept away by water. But we may be talking about a greater catastrophe than any of this. It may be that either the poles of the Earth reversed, causing the planet to flip over, or the poles of the sun reversed. Either of those things could have caused great catastrophes on earth. Another theory is that a large asteroid may have passed very close to Earth, causing the catastrophes. Whatever happened, the point being made is that the ancient temples of spiritual development were destroyed or damaged to the point where they stopped being used, resulting in a descent into materialism. A recent news article says there is evidence of a major cataclysm in the Nile Delta of Egypt in ancient times.

The Great God

The quote continues by saying the people of Egypt should weep for the betrayed gods and the Great God they hardly knew. Of course, the students, adepts, and masters in the great spiritual schools knew of the Great God, the one and only True God, but only the most advanced students were able to reach the very high level of consciousness that permitted them to communicate directly with God and his Angels., so only they could claim to truly know God.

“Stars Get Earworms Too, And The ‘Songs’ Could Tell Us Their History”

The “music” of starquakes – enormous vibrations caused by bursting bubbles of gas that ripple throughout the bodies of many stars – can reveal far more information about the stars’ histories and inner workings than scientists thought.

In new research published in Nature, we analysed the frequency signatures of starquakes across a broad range of giant stars in the M67 star cluster, almost 3,000 light years from Earth.

“Matter vs. Antimatter: LHC Discovery Could Explain How Universe Avoided Obliteration”

Matter and antimatter should have completely wiped each other out eons ago, leaving the Universe a very empty place.

Obviously that didn't happen. Experiments at the Large Hadron Collider (LHC) may have uncovered new clues as to how we avoided this apocalypse, hinting at a surprising difference in the decays of particles called baryons and their antimatter twin.

“Massive collision created Mercury, study suggests”

- How did planet Mercury form? Scientists have been pondering this question for a long time.
- According to new research, Mercury originated from the massive grazing collision of 2 similarly-sized bodies.
- Collisions like this one were common in the early solar system billions of years ago. In fact, they likely accounted for about 1/3 of all impacts.
