

Japan Intervention Service held

More than 50 members of the International Community of Christ and the Satya-chetana Movement gathered in Reno at the Chapel of the Holy Child at 4:00 PM on Saturday, March 19, 2011, to hold a special service of intervention to help prevent the recurrence of earthquake and tsunami disturbances in Japan and to arrest immediately the threat of nuclear explosion. Similar services were held simultaneously in India at the Sri Kalahasti Temple near Tirupathi in the state of Andhra Pradesh and in Japan in Kurume, south of Fukuoka City, on the southernmost of the four main islands of Japan.

Regional Interfaith Seminar

held in California

More than thirty interfaith leaders from four western states came together for a two-day conference in the California Bay Area.

The Western Regional Interfaith Leaders Conference held March 7-8, 2011 at San Damiano Retreat, Danville, California was a gathering of presidents and directors of interfaith movements in California, Nevada, Arizona, and Utah. The aim of the conference is to improve dialogue between organizations and to share information and insights, as well as to provide time for leaders to describe the various projects being undertaken in their respective areas. Emphasis was on ways and means of improving communication between interfaith organizations, including reaching out to youth, funding, and increasing activity online and in virtual reality formats. Bishop Gene Savoy, Jr., president of the Nevada Clergy Association (NCA), focused in his presentations on the interreligious activities, services, and events that NCA promotes.

This year's participants agreed to meet again in 2012 at the San Damiano Retreat Center. The 2011 gathering was the second to be held. The first such gathering was held in Phoenix, Arizona in 2010. Bishop Savoy accepted the invitation to serve on the planning committee for the 2012 conference.

An interfaith memorial service was held Sunday, January 16, 2011 at 3:00 PM at Reno First Methodist Church in downtown Reno. The theme of this year's event was "Remembering the Dream, Fulfilling the Mandate." Owing to the efforts of the Reverend Onie Cooper of the Second Baptist Church, this event was originally brought to fruition and has continued for decades. It is now up to the Nevada Clergy Association to join the Holiday Committee to help "keep the dream alive." Both the Nevada Clergy Association and the Northern Nevada Martin Luther King, Jr. Holiday Committee are presently headed by Bishop Gene Savoy Jr.

On Monday, January 17, a memorial caravan, beginning at 10:30 AM at the Second Baptist Church in Reno, followed the twenty-six miles of the Martin Luther King Jr. Memorial Highway along US 395.

The 2010 Nevada Prayer Breakfast revived, in a new form, the old tradition of the Governor's Prayer Breakfast after a ten-year absence of the once annual event. The Nevada Clergy Association (NCA) plans to continue the tradition of the Nevada Prayer Breakfast as one of its programs. Other programs and events sponsored by NCA are the annual Martin Luther King, Jr. Memorial Celebration, the annual Interfaith Thanksgiving Eve Service, now in its 25th year, the bi-annual Clergy Lunches hosted by the various participating congregations, occasional conferences and study groups, and regular email communications on programs and events of mutual interest.

The Right Reverend Gene Savoy Jr., Bishop of the International Community of Christ Church and President of the Nevada Clergy Association, welcomed a body of 300 clergy and congregants at the Nevada Prayer Breakfast on November 16, 2010. His brief history of the Association and his message of respect and consideration set the tone for the event. An abbreviated version of his address follows:

It is indeed a pleasure to be with you for this revival of an old Nevada tradition.

First I would like to thank mayors Cashell, Martini, and Crowell for their endorsement of this event. Without their support, and the hard work of the Breakfast Planning Committee, we would not be here today. So I thank all of you for taking time and making a contribution.

We have a good turnout this morning, and we will continue this tradition year after year for our civic, religious, and business leaders, so that we can all be aided in making the right decisions for our local communities, our families, our nation, and the great state of Nevada.

We are here to celebrate Nevada's diverse and thriving religious community, especially the interreligious community we have fostered in Northern Nevada, which has become and is becoming increasingly an example for other communities across the nation.

The Nevada Clergy Association was recently contacted by a professor at the Claremont School of Theology in Claremont, California, affiliated with the United Methodist Church, who is writing a book on interfaith dialogue and collaboration and wanted to feature what we do here in Northern Nevada because she feels it can serve as an example to others.

Many of you may remember the not-too-distant past – perhaps 30 years ago – when various religions or denominations were not welcome in our community. And it was due to the efforts of the likes of Rabbi Myra Soifer of Temple Sinai, Father

George Bratiotis of Saint Anthony Greek Orthodox Church, and Bishop Phil Straling of the Catholic Diocese of Reno that we all – all of us in our different and diverse ways – are able to gather from time to time in peace and fellowship and unity. We do this in testament not only to our God but to ourselves as brothers and sisters of the human family.

We are able to set this example today, most importantly, due to the efforts of the man we honor today: The reverend James Jeffery. I have had the pleasure of knowing the Jeffery family and working with Jim for many years. He is a beautiful person and a wonderful man who is deserving of the gathering today.

You all know Father Jim, and his biography appears in your program, so I won't take time to repeat what you already know. But I will tell you a short story.

Within the Nevada Clergy Association we have a running joke about "the List." And that list is the interfaith clergy list. Well, the joke is always about the "keeper" of said list, as if he or she wields some sort of grand authority. (It would be better said that the joke is rather on the keeper of the List!) So, some years ago, when Father Jeffery was about to retire, he came to me and asked if I would be the keeper of the List. I, of course, was honored to accept the "grave" responsibility, as well as the low pay for the task.

The point is that the List – our network of interfaith clergy and religious leaders – had about 25 or 30 names on it when it was passed along to me. As of yesterday's count, that List now contains 349 names: religious leaders who represent a broad spectrum of Northern Nevada faith communities. And the List has become a wonderful tool: the announcements, the information exchanged, the events we hold together, and the friendships that have been forged because of it.

I would like to leave you with an idea before turning the podium over. It is the concept of tolerance versus respect. If we go to the dictionary, it tells us everything we need to know.

The definition of respect is “the act of giving particular attention or consideration,” “high or special esteem,” “to refrain from interfering with,” and “to have regard for.”

On the other hand, tolerance is “the ability to endure the effects of a psychological insult without exhibiting the usual unfavorable effects,” “the capacity of an organism to grow when subjected to an unfavorable environments factor,” “sympathy or indulgence for beliefs or practices conflicting with one’s own,” “the act of allowing something which differs from the standard.”

What we at the Nevada Clergy Association represent is respect and consideration, as well as the special and high regard we hold for one another as Children of God, embracing and valuing and sharing with one another the various ways we choose to worship and express our faith traditions.

Father Jim Jeffery addresses interfaith clergy

The Reverend Jim Jeffery, Rector Emeritus of Trinity Episcopal Church, addressed a crowd of 300 after he received the first annual Vision Award from the Nevada Clergy Association at the 2010 Northern Nevada Prayer Breakfast. His moving address was made more so by the musical accompaniment provided by a duo of Carmelite Sisters, Clorinda de Stockalper OCD on piano and Claire Sokol OCD on cello, performing Debussy's Reverie, at the climax of his talk. An abbreviated version of his Keynote Address follows:

It was a wonderful achievement to have this Prayer Breakfast brought back to life after ten years of absence. (In the Christian tradition, resurrection comes three days after death, not ten years, but that's a story for a different time and place.)

I commend those of you who have made it happen. Scripture says, "without a vision the people perish," and your vision of our gathering together again helps counter the ignorance and suspicion that is part of today's climate regarding religion.

A accept with gratitude and humility the first annual Vision Award. In doing so, I pay tribute to many folk, some of whom are in this room, others who have gone to god, who have shared with me a belief in our common humanity while representing a broad spectrum of faith differences.

That I am here in this way is what I call a carrot/stick combination. The carrot: the Award. The stick: that I was also to give this talk!

The Quakers wisely caution, "Don't speak unless you can improve upon the silence."

A writer once advised, it's really very easy to be a writer, all you have to do is sit down at the typewriter (today we'd say computer) and open a vein. I believe the same holds true of speaking.

As I began to bleed in preparation for this talk, I was inspired to ask my Carmelite friends (who pray and who are also musically gifted) to help me and I thank Sisters Cloe and Claire for saying yes.

And I am indebted to my wife who listened many times to what I was composing then in a tactful way would say "it need work." Bunny, thanks is too small a word.

A few years ago, I heard someone say in a downtown Reno setting that for a community to be whole and healthy, it needed four ingredients, all beginning with the letter P. A plaza where people can gather; a pump where water flows; a pub where folk can eat and drink; and a pulpit or religious setting where deep spirituality is witnessed to.

I believe this event comes under the pulpit portion of those ingredients, and perhaps a bit of the pub.

What we do here this morning takes place in a comfortable setting, but the name of this event, prayer, is not always so comfortable.

Anglican Archbishop Rowan Williams has said that prayer is sometimes "a battle and a struggle."

In the midst of real life events, be they on a personal plane such as family illness or strife; a community struggling with unemployment and homelessness, or nations engaged in warfare and violence, the bishop writes, “the struggle is not to let God and the world fall apart from each other.” It is separating that I find poet Robert Frost protesting:

Something there is that doesn't love a wall . . .
His neighbor says, 'Good fences make good neighbors'.
Spring is the mischief in me, and I wonder
If I could put a notion in his head:
'Why do they make good neighbors? Isn't it
Where there are cows? But here there are no cows.
Before I was walling in or walling out,
And to whom I was like to give offence.
Something there is that doesn't love a wall,
That wants it down'. . . .
– “Mending Wall”

Instead of being like his neighbor who picks up a stone in each hand, who Frost describes “like an old stone-savage armed” to repair the fence, you and I are called upon to be among those who want the fences down and refuse to allow God and the world to separate from each other.

Hear Rowan Archbishop Williams again: “God and the world belong to each together. There is no place where the love of God can't go.” This is incredibly hard to accept. But we of the various faith traditions are charged to believe and act upon it.

Within our various religious texts there are examples of what I'm talking about. Situations or times when God's love is severely questioned. How can God love that much when there seems to be hardly anything worthy or lovable? When the whole world seems caught up in cruelty and pain?

My faith tradition, and I would like to believe other traditions as well, would say that God's love is there even before there is any hope or light or possibility.

Music is a way that prepares us to consider the possibility.

Our calling is to participate in the costly struggle to hold together God and the world, love and suffering, light and darkness, vision and despair.

I includes verbal prayers for particular persons and conditions, but it also includes times of silence, no asking, no words whatsoever.

The latter is what I believe Archbishop Desmond Tutu meant when he was asked about his prayer life and replied, "It's no longer a shopping list, but more a sitting by the fire and warming myself."

Prayer is one way in which our hearts can be opened. It is an alternative against our hearts being closed. It is a never ending process.

Music can help us do that, creating a portal through which we let God's spirit in.

What Robert Frost calls "Spring Mischief" I call "God's Spirit" urging us to enter into relationships with others who share the vision of our oneness as human beings, and to celebrate our relationship with the Holy One (called by many names), who made us one and who will not be content until we call each other sister and brother.

This is my vision, and hopefully yours as well.
