COSOLARGY NEWSLETTER JULY 2020

Greetings!

Welcome to our monthly bulletin with information of interest to friends of Cosolargy International. In this issue we bring you up to date with current and future events and provide a little background on our founder, the late Gene Savoy Sr, and his explorations into solar cultures, along with some uplifting words of inspiration.

If you are curious about the solar techniques and activities of our Community, contact us by using the Contact Form on the Cosolargy International website. It will be forwarded to the appropriate representative for your area.

In these trying times, if you would like to have a prayer said for you or others, click the Prayer Request button at the end of this newsletter.

Excerpt from Project X - The Search for the Secrets of Immortality

Our research suggests that long and systematic exposure to sunlight not only enhances the sensitivity of the photoreceptors (rods and cones) in the retina, but somehow brings forth new ones able to register a creative energy contained within sunlight, which introduces new images into the medullary area of the brain and stimulates or brings about a higher consciousness. In our work we found that the pineal gland, located in the center of the brain, appeared to respond to the spectral characteristics of solar radiation, effecting biochemical changes. This appears to result in the development of a "third eye," which, unlike ordinary eyesight, produces a "vision" of its own.

Angels Dancing on a Pin and Other Angel Knowledge

Here is a brief excerpt:

Angels Dancing on a Pin

"How many angels can dance on the head of a pin?" (alternatively "How many angels can stand on the point of a pin?" [1]) is a reductio ad absurdum challenge to medieval scholasticism in general, and its angelology in particular, as represented by figures such as Duns Scotus and Thomas Aquinas. [2][3] It is first recorded in the 17th century, in the context of Protestant apologetics. It also has been linked to the fall of Constantinople, with the imagery of scholars debating while the Turks besieged the city.

"In modern usage, the term has lost its theological context and is used as a metaphor for wasting time debating topics of no practical value, or questions whose answers hold no intellectual consequence, while more urgent concerns accumulate." ~Wikipedia

Here we have a question which is a little silly on the surface yet it grabs attention, and we find references to it in the 13th, 17th, and 21st centuries. What is the question behind the question that has people coming back to it? At heart is a question about the relationship between the nonmaterial world of the spirit and physical matter and form. As we hop four centuries from one reference to another, we find different approaches to the relationship between the three.

There is no evidence that Thomas Aquinas considered this particular question about angels, but he was a university professor in the 13th century who posited similar questions to his students to stimulate logical analysis of ideas. As a young man, he became interested in the Greek philosophers who were being newly translated at the time. He was an advocate of Aristotle's methods of the application of logical analysis in the development of philosophical and theological ideas. In our scientific era we take this analytic approach for granted, but in the 13th century it was a revolutionary idea. Aquinas does consider a related question in one of his articles on angels. He asks if multiple angels who are nonmaterial intelligences can occupy the same space at the same time. The question is not if they would displace each other, but to state it in 21st century words, if nonmaterial beings outside the 3rd dimensional time-space continuum can be located within a specific space. Aquinas in other writings questions the relationship between spirit, matter, and form by asking if the soul contains the form that controls the shape of the physical matter of the body. If we replace the word "soul" with "light body" or "field," this becomes an interesting question.

2019 Baja California Sur Impact Expedition

Three years ago, Cosolargy International purchased a 2.3-acre piece of beachfront property for future use, in the town of El Cardonal, just north of Los Barriles. It is located in the Gulf of California (also known as the Sea of Cortez), off Baja California Sur in an area known as Cabo del Este.

On November 15, 2019, the National Geographic Sea Lion, a ship designed to navigate narrow inlets and wildlife-rich passageways inaccessible to larger ships, embarked on a five-day expedition to the extraordinary East Cape of southern Baja. Love for the region eventually led to collaboration between members of the exploration and Cosolargy International.

The expedition was organized by LegacyWorks Group together with Lindblad Expeditions and National Geographic, along with support from several philanthropies and committed individuals, with the intent to develop a sustainable network of resources and an action plan for the East Cape region of Baja California Sur - a unique and remarkable natural treasure.

Why Join Cosolargy?

Does Cosolargy Provide Direction in Times of Crisis?

We are living in tumultuous times, with both the viral pandemic and civil unrest leaving many people struggling with poor physical health, financial woes and mental anxiety. In times of crisis, people look for real meaning that provides strength. Ideally, we'd all prepare a safe haven for ourselves before disaster strikes, but it is never too late to chart a new course. No doubt even more surprises will come out of left field in future.

Cosolargy provides members with a sense of certainty and meaning in their lives that can only come with actual experience – not just reading and talking, but living the life of Light. There is no one else today offering what this System teaches.

The System of Cosolargy is designed for those living in modern society, in the real world – not in a commune or retreat. Life will always throw challenges at us, however when you learn to know your true Self, you add meaning and depth to your life. This brings clearer sight through which you perceive order, rather than chaos, surrounding you.

Our Academy offers what other systems have lost: techniques for evolving the spiritual being beyond the merely physical and psychic experiences of the world. When the System is applied, higher faculties evolve and there is clarity about your purpose, role and direction in life. It prepares you to return to your original Self that you have forgotten, to the fullness of one who knows they are eternal and immortal.
