

Wisconsin Healing Center Offers Intro to Cosolargy Seminar

Consociate Peig Myota returned to the Milwaukee, Wisconsin, area after an eight-month visit to Reno and is again providing her introductory course to Cosolargy there in the form of a “Solar Light private study program.”

She will present her new introductory seminar, “Solar Consciousness” on Jan. 25, 2013, at the Healing Center in Germantown, Wisconsin.

Her new seminar is announced in print and online under the title “Solar Light Consciousness: The Path to Transformation.”

Peig Myota

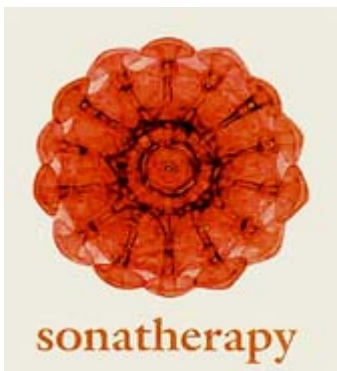

In mid-June Peig Myota and Lee Ann Baum, who had been residing in Reno for the preceding eight months, announced that they were preparing to return home to the Milwaukee area to reopen their healing center with new insight and a new direction. They have been working with the Feronia Wellness Center since that time to reestablish themselves in Germantown, Wisconsin. And they recently celebrated the grand opening of their new offices.

Steamboat Healing Center staff visits Milwaukee

Sean Savoy, President of the Board at The Healing Center & Spa at Steamboat Hot Springs,

Elisabeth Weilharter, Healing Center manager, and Gary Buchanan, Sonatherapy research director, recently returned from a three-day trip to Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

They were visiting our affiliate healing center there, The Healing Place, directed by Peig Myota and Lee Ann Baum. Gary gave Sonatherapy sessions to many people while Elisabeth and our colleague Lee Ann observed and assisted. Gary then gave a full day Sonatherapy seminar to interested practitioners, while Sean gave small-group instruction in the healing arts and sciences of Cosolargy, the spiritual system of health of mind-body-psyche-spirit that informs Sonatherapy. While they were there, they also conferred about other healing modalities being undertaken at the Healing Place that we are looking forward to implementing soon at Steamboat. These include better light and color therapies.
