The Origins of Cosolargy

Quotes from Gene Savoy, Sr.

"ONE MORNING, The Man climbed a hill to collect his thoughts and plan how best to serve God+. He often went to the forested crest, to a cave that harbored an image of the Virgin Mary. Reverently, he lit a candle and arranged a bouquet of flowers at the foot of the statue. Kneeling, he took his rosary and prayed. He remained on his knees a long time. He might have remained longer had he not felt the warmth of the rising sun falling on his shoulders and heard the songbirds saluting the golden orb. He then turned from the statue and walked over to a ledge and stood looking down upon the sleeping city, blinking in the bright light. He closed his eyes and listened to the sounds of wildlife rustling in the first light of dawn.

A soft breeze began to blow across his face, and the tree branches above his head danced about. The gilded rays fell on his eyelids, and he had an urge to look into the golden disk. As he slowly opened his eyes, he saw the whole horizon aglow with light. Below, the woods and grasslands, wet with mist, glistened like a carpet woven from millions of sparkling diamonds. Out of the corner of his left eye he caught sight of the delicate webbing of a spider holding dew drops, reflecting a rainbow of colors as if made of prisms.

He looked directly into the sun. A kaleidoscope of colors and geometric patterns swam before his vision. Like miniature suns, his eyes were linked to the greater Light+; they became part of a galaxy of stars, revolving around the center of the universe now throbbing as a heavenly heart."

Commentary on the Bhagavad Gita Chapter Three

"Arjuna contested: O motivator of men, if it is Your idea that the mental approach is better than the physically-active one, then why do You urge me to commit horrible action, O handsome-haired One? (3.1) You baffle my intelligence with this two-way proposal. Mention one priority, by which I would surely get the best result. (3.2) The Blessed Lord said: In the physical world, a two-fold standard was previously taught by Me, O Arjuna, my good man. This was mind regulation by the yoga practice of the Sāṁkhya philosophical yogis and the action regulation by the yoga practice of the non-philosophical yogis. (3.3) A man does not attain freedom from cultural activity merely by not being involved in social affairs. And not by renunciation alone, does he achieve spiritual perfection. (3.4)" ...

"Moral action should be done by you. Performance is better than non-performance. Even the maintenance of your body could not be achieved without activity. (3.8) Besides action for religious fulfillment and ceremony, this world is action-bound. Act for the sake of religious fulfillment and ceremony, O son of Kuntī. Be free from attachment. Act promptly.

"Therefore, being always unattached, perform the action which is your duty. By being detached and executing the required tasks, a person gets the highest stage. (3.19)" ...

"One should not produce indeterminateness in the minds of the simpletons. A wise person should inspire them to be satisfied by action. ...

"A human being, even a wise man, acts according to his material nature. The creatures submit to material nature." ~Bhagavad Gita chapter 3

In chapter three of the Srimad Bhagavad Gita, the most popular of the Vedanta writings, the discussion between Arjuna and Sri Krishna regarding participation in war continues from the previous chapter. I remind the readers that I am commenting on the Bhagavad Gita from the point of view of a student of Cosolargy. Also, my comments are on the whole chapter, not just the shlokas quoted above.

There are now more than 5,000 confirmed planets beyond our solar system

There are now more than 5,000 confirmed planets beyond our solar system, according to NASA.

The latest addition of 65 exoplanets to the NASA Exoplanet Archive contributed to the scientific milestone marked on Monday. This archive is the home to exoplanet discoveries from peer-reviewed scientific papers that have been confirmed using multiple methods of detecting the planets.

“It’s not just a number,” said Jessie Christiansen, science lead for the archive and a research scientist with the NASA Exoplanet Science Institute at the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena, in a statement. “Each one of them is a new world, a brand-new planet. I get excited about every one because we don’t know anything about them.”

We’re currently living in a golden age of exoplanet discovery. Although the existence of planets outside of our solar system had been previously proposed and certainly depicted in science fiction, these worlds were only first discovered in the 1990s.
